Training Description:

When providing the service of assessment and evaluation, we often feel like interviewers – asking standardized questions to a perfect stranger. This is often an initial meeting with the patient and these are often intimate questions. Our minds are bogged with requirements: what to document, how to determine credibility, is there any indication of a substance use disorder, how will they respond when I recommend treatment?

This installment of the training series will offer different approaches to assessment and evaluation. It provides guidance on why this service is provided by a trained professional and not an online survey. Assessment and evaluation are skills which require that the professional provide an environment of trust. Participants will build confidence and identify “what works” when meeting with patients for this service.

Training Cost: $40.00 - to be included with this Registration form
